Cumulative Index
Volumes 1–25
1973–1997

The information available in this cumulative index is also available electronically at the World Wide Web site maintained by the Journal of Religious Ethics at Georgetown University. The web site reproduces the author index that is printed here and, in addition, offers abstracts of all of the articles that we have published. The electronic index is updated as new issues appear, and contents pages for all past issues can be retrieved. The "find" feature can be used with the electronic cumulative index to search for titles when neither the author nor the publication date is known. The web site is also designed to allow users to conduct subject searches (using the user-friendly "Excite" search instrument) in a process that sorts through not only the author index but also the attached abstracts of the articles. We invite you to use the web site as a research tool. The URL is http://www.georgetown.edu/ethics/jre

Subject Index

Any subject index is, to some large degree, arbitrary. Such a compilation can only be suggestive, not definitive. A different editor (or even the same editor with more staff or more time) would no doubt have drawn the categories differently or would have assigned articles by different (or clearer) criteria. Moreover, since the subject categories by no means exhaust the topics JRE authors have considered, many articles listed in the author index do not appear in the subject index at all. For subjects not addressed here (or only imperfectly addressed), please use the electronic index and search engine available at the JRE web site (http://www.georgetown.edu/ethics/jre).
